To what group, if any, the sun belongs, we do not yet know, but Delaney has presented reasons for thinking that those stars whose distances have been measured (that is to say, those which are nearest to us), group themselves around Sirius, the dog star, in a manner similar to that in which the inner planets are grouped around the sun. If this is correct, Sirius may possibly be the master sun of which our orb of day is a distant satellite.—Harper's Weekly.

Wherein Money Has Value.

Strictly speaking, money is neither good nor ill. It is a force like water, or wind, or electricity, and in itself is, therefore, without moral quantity. It is a force, made good or bad by its use.—Hillis.

As to Babies. "Any one can be a parent, but it takes a gift to elevate such common products as children. You have got to make the public forget that they yell, have to be fed at regular hours, and get colic. You must make people feel that they are pretty and plump and a tremendous privilege."—Maude Radford Warren, in "Peter, Peter," (Harpers).

PARROT AN INTERESTING PET

Bird Must Be Taken Care Of, But Well Repays All the Attention Bestowed.

Parrots, always popular, are now quite the rage, and any girl acquiring one for the first time will find him a most interesting pet. Mr. Poll need not screech or be otherwise objectionable to those who do not admire him, and indeed never will be noisy unless he is unhappy because hungry, thirsty, ill or lonely.

Under any of these conditions we humans cry out until relieved, and Polly will do the same. He is a most sociable fellow and though sometimes a great talker, he is a good listener as well, cocking his little head on one side when conversed with, and seeming to take it all in in a most intelligent and often most comical way. If left too much alone he gets unhappy and mopes so that unless you understand the cause you might think him seriously ill.

Music in any form he adores and it will always brighten him when he is grumpy. Another of his peculiarities is that he dislikes to be disturbed when asleep, and as, like humans, he is susceptible to draught when slumbering, it is wise as well as kind to cover his cage at night with a cloth.

JOKE ON ALL THE GUESTS

Instinctively, Every One Reached Up to See if Her Braids Were Missing.

She was giving her friend, who was just convalescing from a long illness, a lively account of the funniest thing that happened during the party she had attended the night before. "The whole affair," she exclaimed brightly, "was after supper, and we were having a fine waitz, when a younger sister of the girl who was giving the party appeared in the wide doorway and called out in a loud voice, 'Did anyone here lose this?' She flourished a heavy braid of brown hair above her head, and, my dear, every girl in that room stood stock still and put her hand up to the back of her head!"

"The boys all roared with laughter and said the joke was on us, and things of that sort. I guess it was on us, all right. I don't wear false hair myself, but my hand went back with all the others. It was simply irresistible, the suggestion that she gave. Of course, the braid didn't belong to anyone. The girl had simply bought it to have some fun with. And we had the fun, too."

WOULD UPLIFT THE STAGE.

Mrs. William Ellicott of Baltimore says that the American stage is at present so vulgar that she is in favor of anything that will remedy the evil and is in sympathy with the new society formed in Chicago for that purpose. She does not believe in censoring plays so much as in trying to uplift the moral and intellectual lives of the people, and this is the real work of women's clubs in that direction, she thinks.

THE PESSIMIST.

"Worried! What in the world about; you have reached a glorious middle age, your children are doing well and you have all the heart can desire."

"It's the comet."

"But the comet will miss the earth by millions of miles."

"This time, but it will be around again in 75 years, and it might knock us all into a cocked hat then."

WORKED BOTH ENDS.

"My friend," said the stranger with the unbarbered hair at the church door, "to what end has your life work been directed?"

"To both ends," rejoined the man who was beginning to carry weight for age. "I am sole proprietor of the only hat and shoe store in this village."

A PROPER NAME.

"You have christened your baby 'Halley's Comet?'"

"Yes. It's unusual but appropriate. He's a bright spot in one existence that gets us up at all sorts of unearthly hours."

HIS MODEST HOPE.

"Then you don't want to leave footprints upon the sands of time?"

"Nix," answered the politician, guardedly. "All I want is to cover up my tracks."

NO CHANCE FOR ARGUMENT

Young Man, With Protest on His Tongue, Was Called to Withdraw Carefully.

A young man inmate of a boarding house had been disturbed night after night by the boarder in the next room doing things with a punching bag he'd rigged up in the room some way.

At breakfast each morning the young man would look over the crowd and wonder who the bag puncher might be, but there was no one in sight but a bunch of women and eight or ten men with narrow chests and retreating chins.

One night he made up his mind to knock on the bag punching roomer's door and ask him to put over his exercises until daylight when all the world's awake. The man might be small enough to bulldoze even with all his athletics.

The door opened and there clad in a tight fitting red jersey was a robust, buxom woman of perhaps 30 summers.

"And what did you say to her?" the young man was asked.

"I was so startled," replied he, "that I asked what afterwards seemed to me the most natural request I could have made. I asked her if she'd lend me a couple of matches."

GENTLEMAN AS WELL AS POET

Kindly Act of Robert Browning That Will Be Appreciated by His Admirers.

While Robert Browning and his son Barrett were living alone in Florence, the son gave, one afternoon, an exhibition of his new painting in the family drawing-room. To Mr. Browning was assigned the task of meeting the guests. Late in the afternoon when the room was well filled there appeared at the drawing-room door a woman whose face was familiar. Yet Mr. Browning could not recall her name, and he judged from her appearance that she was not an invited guest. There was embarrassment on both sides for a moment, and then the woman said eagerly: "Oh, please Mr. Browning, I'm the cook. Mr. Barrett said as I was to come and see his pretty picture."

Whereupon, Mr. Browning, offering his arm, showed her about the room with all the attention that he could have bestowed upon a reigning queen.

ACCUSTOMED TO FREEZING AIRS.

The duke of Fotheringill had given a great feast at Fotheringill castle to commemorate the coming of age of his son and heir, the dashing Lord Higlicollar.

To this function had been invited the journalistic representative of a leading London daily.

On the scribe's return to Fleet street he was asked to relate his adventures at the ducal home, and, among the questions, some one asked him, "if the duchess' affability had not somewhat embarrassed him."

"Not a bit of it," he replied, with that air of serene ease, calmness and self-satisfaction which so eminently becomes him. "Before I took up newspaper work, my boy, I used to test refrigerators!"—Sunday Magazine of the Los Angeles Herald.

CITY OF KANO.

Kano, "the Manchester of the Sudan," which is to benefit by the railway construction now going on in Nigeria, seems to be rich in English nicknames, for at one time it was known as the London of the Sudan. With walls whose circuit is over fifteen English miles, Kano is a large town, producing enormous quantities of cotton cloth and being the center of the trade in kola nuts, which are imported from behind the gold coast. It has been estimated that the average daily attendance at its market is nearly 30,000.

SMITH AND POLITICAL ECONOMY.

The real father of modern political economy, that is to say, of the true principles of the science, was Adam Smith. His book, the "Wealth of Nations," was published in 1776, as to economic conditions what the Declaration of Independence was to political conditions—a statement of the rock-bottom principles upon which the world was ever afterward to depend in its economic progress. As the Philadelphia document created a new nation, so Smith's book created a new political economy for all the nations.
